Cops: Man took pics of woman in college restroom

Plymouth police are looking for a man they said took images of a woman in a bathroom stall at a local college campus.

Police recently posted surveillance images online of the man they believe is responsible for the crime. The incident took place at Quincy College's Plymouth campus.

The man, police said, entered the women's bathroom earlier this month and used a cell phone to take either video or photographs of a woman in a stall.

Tobin tolls go all electronic today

Starting today, for the first time in decades, drivers will no longer be able to pay cash at the Tobin Bridge tolls.

Before today's morning rush hour, the Tobin tolls were scheduled to be converted into an all-electronic format equipped with E-ZPass readers.

The tolls are equipped with cameras to capture the license plate of cars without an E-ZPass. The registered owner will then be billed.

Boston. Three colleagues are preparing to outrun the city's most hated train in a 4.1-mile race.

Three employees from the popular fitness app RunKeeper are setting out to prove they can outrun Boston's oldest and most frustrating mode of public transportation: the Green Line.

On Friday, runners Phil Connaughton, Matt Wilson and John Sullivan will embark on the 4.1-mile "Outrun the Green Line" race along the B Line. The race was coordinated by RunKeeper and The Boston Calendar, according to the event listing site's founder, Sean O'Connor.

endar aiming to become Boston's go-to calendar for 'events that don't suck,' and RunKeeper focused on technology and fitness, the collaboration on 'Outrun the Green Line' made perfect sense," said O'Connor, who brainstormed the idea.

RunKeeper Community Manager Jim Redding plans to ride the trolley as it departs Boston College station so he can live tweet the race from the @RunKeeper Twitter account.

The mad dash will also be tracked by the app and video will be streamed on YouTube, Redding said.

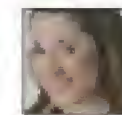

The men are optimistic that they can take the notoriously slow trolley.

"I'm pretty competitive. I hope I can beat it because I hate the Green Line. It's terrible, and it's given me enough headaches throughout the years," said Wilson.

The winner will get bragging rights, but regardless of the outcome, the group has a plan for a post-run celebration.

"We'll probably have some day drinking," said Wilson.

Business. Market Basket CEO protest intensifies

Shelves at most locations of the popular local grocery store chain Market Basket remained close to empty over the week-end as workers protested over the ousting of the company's former CEO.

Thousands of workers called upon the company to reinstate Arthur T. Demoulas, the company's former leader. It is now controlled by Arthur S. Demoulas after reported in-fighting of the family-owned company.

More than a dozen state elected officials signed a letter that called for an immediate boycott of Market Basket, according to the Globe. METRO

A fight between two men ended with one of them being stabbed on Boylston Street near the Boston Public Library Saturday night.

Boston police were called to the area of 715 Boylston St. at about 8:20 p.m. for a report of a person stabbed. Police said the 50-year-old man suffered serious injuries. He was taken to a local hospital.

The stabbing occurred after the victim and the alleged attacker, Stephen Gassett, 57, of Boston, got into a fight, police said.

Driving records. MBTA raises bar for new drivers

The MBTA has raised its standards for new bus and train drivers by implementing revised hiring criteria it describes as the strictest in the nation.

"A number of employment candidates who were hired prior to this year would not be eligible under the new criteria," said MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo. "The new standards are considered by many to be the most stringent among major U.S. transit systems."

Last week, an MBTA driver who was fired for crashing a bus in May while using her cell phone asked that her license be reinstated. An investigation revealed that Shanna Shaw had a history of "unsafe and irresponsible driving behavior" that included violations such as speeding.

Under the new criteria, a driving candidate will not be considered if he or she has a driving record containing any of the following: an automobile law violation

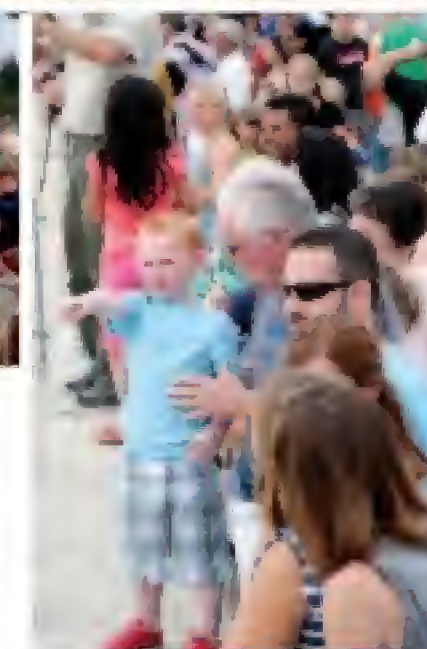

Out with the old

Under the previous driving-record criteria for hiring new drivers, which were in place since the 1980s, candidates were disqualified for:

- Having three or more moving violations in the same year in the past three years
- Driving while under the influence once or more within the past five years
- Being found at fault in a fatal vehicle accident

within the past two years; an at-fault accident within the past two years; a major traffic law violation within the past five years; a license suspension in the past five years that resulted from one or more automobile law violations; or a refusal of a Breathalyzer test in the past 10 years.

Trial

Deliberations continue for Tsarnaev's friend

The jury weighing obstruction of justice and conspiracy charges against a friend of Boston bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev will resume deliberations today, with a verdict expected this week.

Azamat Tazhayakov, a Kazakh exchange student, is the first of three of Tsarnaev's friends to be charged with interfering in authorities' investigation into the April 15, 2013, attack that killed three people and injured 264.

U.S. District Judge Douglas Woodlock, noting that one of the jurors had complained of illness, dismissed the jury late last week until Monday.

The jury began deliberations on Wednesday after six days of testimony. In their closing arguments, the prosecutors and defense attorneys etched conflicting portraits of Tazhayakov. METRO/REUTERS

A table with flowers and candles stands in front of the supermarket. The photos of Frederique and Robert-Jan van Zijtvelde, a brother and sister ages 19 and 18, are shown. The Dutch town of Vleuten, a suburb of Utrecht, is struck with grief because of the death of the two teenagers.

"We knew very quickly that something was terribly wrong," says manager Mischa Verzuu. "Robert-Jan and Frederique worked here with a very close group of friends. They knew the flight number; they knew their friends were on the plane. As soon as we knew for sure, their friends said they wanted to have a march to remember them."

Frederique and Robert-Jan were on vacation — a special trip they took with their grandparents. The destination was Bali, Indonesia, where their family is originally from. But instead of the tropical island of their ancestors, their journey

Malaysia Airlines

Kerry says missile brought from Russia downed jet

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry laid out on Sunday what he called overwhelming evidence of Russian complicity in the downing of Malaysia Airlines flight MH17 and called rebels' behavior "grotesque."

Kerry expressed horror at how pro-Moscow separatists at the crash sites treated the remains of victims, criticized Russian President Vladimir Putin and threatened "additional steps" against Moscow.

British Foreign Secretary Philip Hammond echoed the criticism, urging Moscow to ensure international investigators had access to the crash sites. "Russia risks becoming a pariah state if it does not behave properly," he told Sky television.

At the biggest crash site, where emergency workers had bagged dozens of bodies on Saturday, all had been removed on Sunday morning.

Bloodstained stretchers that had carried them lay empty by the road, and rescue workers moved wreckage with a crane to reach human remains trapped beneath. REUTERS

"Drunken separatists have been piling bodies into trucks and removing them from the site. ... What's happening is really grotesque, and it is contrary to everything President Putin and Russia said they would do."

Ukraine. UN mulling a resolution on Flight MH17 crash site access

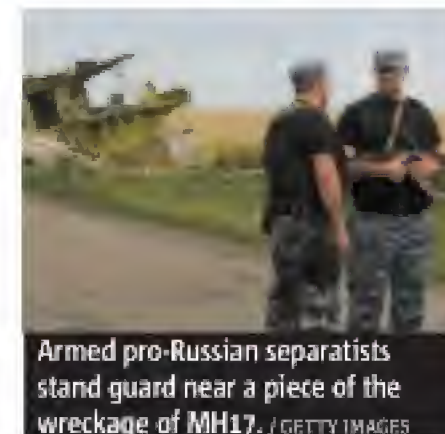

The U.N. Security Council is considering a draft resolution to condemn the "shoot-down" of a Malaysian passenger plane in Ukraine, demand armed groups allow access to the crash site and call on states in the region to cooperate with an international investigation of the incident.

Australia — which lost 28 citizens — circulated a draft text, seen by Reuters, to the 15-member Security Council late on Saturday and diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it could be put to a vote as early as today.

The draft resolution "condemns in the strongest terms the shooting down [of] Malaysia Airlines flight MH17 ... resulting in the tragic loss of 298 lives" and "demands that all states and other actors in the region refrain from acts of violence directed against civilian aircraft."

The United States and other powers have said the plane was likely brought down on Thursday by a surface-to-air missile fired

Television images of the rebel-held crash sites, where the remains of victims had lain decomposing in fields among their personal belongings, have turned initial shock and sorrow after Thursday's disaster into anger. The bodies had been removed from much of the crash site by Sunday. REUTERS

Security Council

Draft of the U.N. resolution:

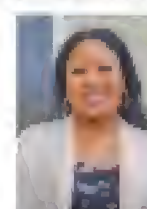

- It "calls on all states and actors in the region to cooperate fully in relation to the international investigation of the incident, including with respect to immediate access to the crash site."
- It "demands that the armed groups in control of the crash site and the surrounding area refrain from any actions that may compromise the integrity of the crash site and immediately provide safe, secure, full and unfettered access to the site and surrounding area."
- It "demands that those responsible be held to account and that all states cooperate fully with efforts to establish accountability" and "calls on all states and actors in the region to cooperate fully in the international investigation."

Jane Lynch shares what she thinks stinks

We met up with Jane Lynch last week, as the actress was using her summer break from "Glee" to promote Febreze. Sure, she shared some anecdotes that she might not have if the company wasn't paying her, but there was one departure from the script that we thought was funny enough to include here. When we asked her about the worst smell she ever encountered, she ended up dissing big department stores and making fun of the most powerful couple in music: "When you go to Macy's or Bloomingdale's and someone is standing there with perfume, and they spray you without you really saying 'yes.' You kind of smile at them, and they take that for a 'yes' and they spray you with Beyoncé's new scent, which you're not interested in at all, and then you have it on all day. I've had to go home and change my clothes because of that. I had Beyoncé all over me! Please don't write this, because her husband will come after me, or the sister in an elevator." LASSE E. KRISTIANSEN

Gwyneth Paltrow is back on her soapbox (and back on dates)

Fear not, parents. Gwyneth Paltrow is back with more excellent lifestyle advice, this time about what you're feeding your kids. Paltrow took to her Goop soapbox to extol the virtues of the new book "Cure Your Child with Food," by Kelly Dorfman, which suggests a lot of recurring ailments could be due to what your kids are eating. For instance, too much dairy is likely the cause of chronic ear infections, and a zinc deficiency can lead to a general

"failure to thrive." And really, isn't preventing any failures in the thriving department what Goop is all about?

In nonpediatric-nutrition news, Paltrow seems to maybe not be reconciling with husband Chris Martin after all, despite recently being spotted with him "operating like a couple" in the Hamptons. The thing is, she was spotted even more recently on a date with a "hot young guy" at NYC restaurant Narcissa, according to Page Six. "He had curly, shaggy hair and looked like he was in his 30s," a source says. "I think they may have been holding hands." No word on whether she advised him on which menu items might cure the common cold though.

Talking point

Lynch not the only one dissing Beyoncé

Songwriter Linda Perry takes issue with singers such as Beyoncé claiming songwriting credits on their hits. "Um, that's not songwriting," Perry says during a Reddit session. "Some of these artists believe if it wasn't for them, your song would never get out there, so they take a cut just because of who they are. But everyone knows the real truth, even Beyoncé. She is talented in a completely different way."

Lindsay,
don't call it a comeback!
Seriously,
don't.

Lindsay Lohan really has it easy sometimes. No, wait. Hear me out. Lohan's career as a "celebrated" actress comes from one film, "Mean Girls," that came out 10 years ago. Since then, the films she's actually managed to show up for have been disappointments and duds, yet she's still held onto the promise that "Mean Girls" created. And now she's been feted at the Ischia Global Film & Music Festival with the Ischia Comeback Award simply for signing up to do David Mamet's "Speed-the-Plow" on the West End. Seems a bit premature, since she's not even in rehearsals yet, but whatever. She's back! Again! Come to think of it, every time Lohan has signed up to do anything, it's considered a comeback.

'Cosby Show' incest between Theo and Denise?

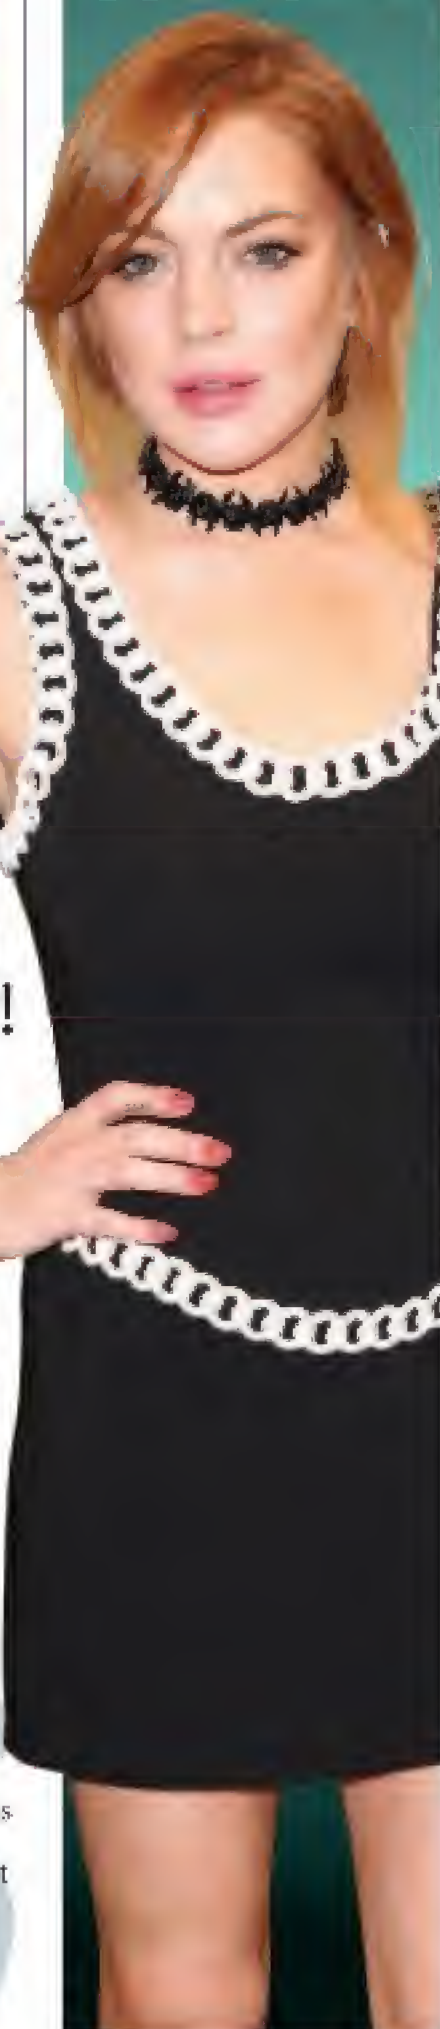

This might not sit well with you, but Malcolm-Jamal Warner has revealed that while making "The Cosby Show," he had a major crush on on-screen sister, Lisa Bonet. "We were so close in age," Warner tells Access Hollywood. "But, you know,

I never had a shot. You just know. Even at 13, 14, you know when you have a shot or not." As for where he stands today with Bonet, who is married to "Game of Thrones" star Jason Momoa? "She's cool," Warner says. "Lisa and I, we've always been very cool."

To be fair, who didn't have a crush on '90s Lisa Bonet? / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Interview. Ellie Kemper was not prepared for the weird questions that come with a role in "Sex Tape."

Ellie Kemper, of "The Office" and "Bridesmaids" fame, knows how to steer a conversation. When talking about the awkward questions that come up regarding "Sex Tape" — in which she plays the friend of a couple (Cameron Diaz and Jason Segel) who actually make one — things quickly got weird.

You're probably fielding a lot of inappropriate questions because of the theme of this movie, huh?

It didn't really occur to me, stupidly, until today: "I guess there are going to be a lot of questions about sex tapes, aren't there?" They haven't been too bad. I haven't made any sex tapes, so I haven't had to bring any up.

That's convenient.

That's very convenient. I planned that. But it hasn't been too bad. There's been some questions about sex tapes in our culture, but I don't have such great insight into that. [Laughs] I think some people want them to be leaked, and that's one thing. But if you are doing something like that and you never want anyone to see it, then you shouldn't do it in the first place. [Laughs]

You've been doing well in comedy. Is there a plan in place for you?

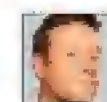

When you're starting out, you think, "I would love a job that pays." And it seems strange to ever say no to any project that comes up. But the general idea that I have right now is to keep doing projects that involve great people because it's a proven recipe for success. So if there's someone you want to work with, it doesn't totally matter what the content is, because it will always yield a better experience and a better product.

Do you see yourself moving out of comedy?

I hope this doesn't make me shallow, but I don't have an interest in doing that right now. I love comedy. I have fun doing it, so I don't feel like I want to be [moving away from it] just yet. But maybe in the second half of my life I will turn all drama, all the time. We'll see.

So you know exactly when the midway point of your life is?

Yup, I'm actually living to 104, so when I'm 52, it's only going to be serial killers and rapists for me. But they still retain a youthful air.

ing to estimates from Rentrak, only the second summer film to top the box office for two consecutive weekends. Low-budget horror film "The Purge: Anarchy" finished in second place with $28.4 million.

Another new release, Walt Disney's animated "Planes: Fire & Rescue," grabbed third place with $18 million, while the comedy "Sex Tape" took in $15 million for the No. 4 spot.

"Apes," a sequel to the 2011 franchise reboot "Rise of the Planet of the Apes," has rung up $242 million worldwide since its July 11 debut, according to distributor 20th Century Fox, a unit of Twenty-First Century Fox. The movie stars Andy Serkis as Caesar, the ape who leads the interactions with humans in the battle for dominance. REUTERS

Socializing media

You're not on Twitter, are you?

I'm not, and it sort of is a conscious decision. I know how I react to things, and I worry that I wouldn't be able to handle Twitter; I would get too involved. It takes up a lot of time. I think that I wouldn't be able to put it away for the night.

Better to keep your sanity, then.

Yeah. Every now and then I say, "I would like to tweet that!" But then I think, "Ugh, but then you'd have to tweet again in an hour."

Farewell to arms

This film also speaks to America's unhealthy gun culture.

There have been 74 school shootings since Sandy Hook. I'm not talking about all the other crap that goes on in the streets. There have been 74 school shootings since Sandy Hook. We got a problem.

All President Obama was saying is: Get a background check. He's not trying to take anybody's guns. He was saying if you're on record as having mental illness or if you have a violent past, it shouldn't be that easy to just buy a gun.

This film is definitely talking about the level of violence we are obsessed with. It's funny when people get 12 hours to purge and guns are the first thing they turn to. How far away we are from that in reality is the question.

Omar Little lives!

Interview. Michael K. Williams says he really admired his revolutionary in "The Purge: Anarchy."

Michael K. Williams is best known as Omar Little, the charismatic gang-preying hood in "The Wire." But he's never been one to be boxed in. In addition to appearances in "RoboCop" and "Kill the Messenger," the actor has a small but key role in "The Purge: Anarchy," in which he plays a revolutionary trying to spread awareness of the real meaning of the annual holiday: Most of the people being killed are the poor and downtrodden. This, he says, isn't far from reality.

Your character gets to be the voice of reason.

He's a mixture of Malcolm X, Huey Newton and Tupac Shakur. He's smart, he's outspoken, he's brave, he's honest. He spoke to me in a lot of ways. I felt like one of the people he was talking to, that he was informing me about what's really going on in the world. He speaks to the downtrodden, the have-nots, the people who don't have a voice, who feel like they've been forgotten by society.

Did the first 'Purge' — which is a critique of blood lust in the moneyed suburbs — speak to you as well?

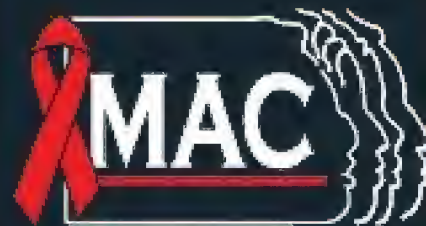

Michael K. Williams' latest role might not be huge, but his character's message is pretty timely. / GETTY IMAGES

I loved part one, but there was an elephant in the room that it did not address but that part two does — that all the poor people were the ones being purged. Or if they weren't being purged, they were being forced to murder just to survive. They don't have the luxury of state-of-the-art security systems to gate themselves in their mansions.

How do you think this film speaks to low-income urban communities?

We're living in a sort of "Purge," with ... the economic divide, the haves and have-nots and the middle class being eradicated. People aren't surviving. ... They can't feed their families; they're eating cat food for dinner. It's like a slow-motion "Purge" happening right now.

Tips for climbing the corporate ladder

Career road map. Here's how young employees can develop gravitas.

There are certain pieces of advice that almost every young entry-level worker gets used to hearing: Look professional at all times, speak confidently, be authoritative.

What's less clear is how a young worker can actually develop these skills.

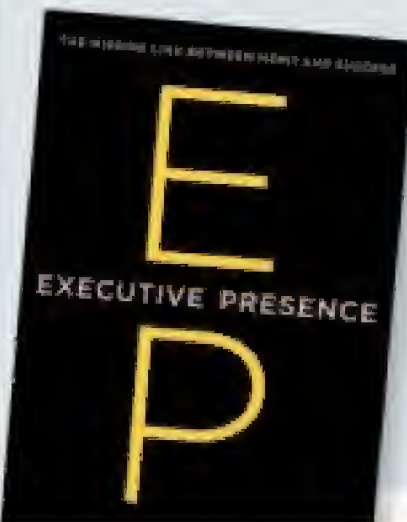

In her new book, "Executive Presence: The Missing Link Between Merit and Success," economist and founder of the Center for Talent Innovation Sylvia Ann Hewlett guides readers through how they can appear more confident and successful in the workplace.

"If you are the most junior person on the team, you have

Tip No. 5

Learn from the experts

For those looking to further practice how to develop an executive presence, Hewlett also recommends watching TED Talks to see how well-known experts manage to explain complex topics in 20 minutes or less.

to prove that you have the right to be there," Hewlett says.

Read on for some pointers from Hewlett for workers who are looking to learn how they can get ahead.

1 Communication is key.

Regardless of what field you are in, the ability to present your thoughts clearly is essential. "It's learning how to be concise," she says. "Make sure that you are contributing something that is fresh and new."

2 Watch your tone.

Your voice can give away a lack of experience or indicate anxiety. "The clarity and pitch of your voice is important," she says.

Hewlett recommends practicing keeping your voice level and cutting down on "up talk," which is when speakers raise their voices at the end of

Find people in the office you can model

Is there someone in the office who always seems to say and do the right thing? "Find a role model who you think cracks the code," Hewlett recommends.

3 Practice, practice, practice.

The key to learning how to speak confidently is repetition, says Hewlett. A good idea is to record yourself speaking as you would at a team meeting. "You can get a friend and practice together," Hewlett says. "Practice how you can boil down your thoughts in a concise way."

4 Be present.

Leave your smartphone behind when attending meetings to avoid the temptation of looking at it. "Team leaders hate it when people show up and seem distracted," she says. "To appear focused and to appear available is half the battle."

Tip No. 7

Don't look at your notes

One of the keys to appearing knowledgeable is to be able to speak without relying on things like PowerPoint and notes. "I'm not saying never use notes," says Hewlett. "But use [PowerPoint] sparingly. Be prepared to make your points without reading them. Tell stories. Make eye contact."

Sexy selfies hurt job prospects

Job hunting. A new study says revealing profile photos can change how people perceive you.

Save your sexy pouts and cocktail dresses for dating sites, ladies.

With job candidates' social media presence increasingly a factor in their employment, a study by Oregon State University found that young women who share sexy or revealing photos of themselves on social media are seen by their female peers as less competent, as well as less physically and socially appealing.

"There is so much pressure on teen girls and young women to portray themselves as sexy, but sharing those sexy photos online may have more negative consequences than positive," assistant professor of psychology Elizabeth Daniels said in a press release.

Daniels, who co-authored

Daniels

the study, said women face a "no-win" situation when choosing how to represent themselves online. Sexier photos risk alienating other women, but more conservative images could cost them the attention of potential male partners.

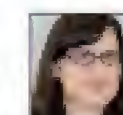

Her findings were based on two identical Facebook profiles for a fictional young woman, Amanda Johnson. The only difference between them was the profile picture: one showed her in a low-cut red dress, and in the other, Johnson wore jeans and a short-sleeved shirt. The profiles were evaluated by 58 teen girls and 60 young women between ages 17 and 25 about whether Amanda was attractive, if they could see themselves being friends with her and her competence.

In all three categories, the modest profile was rated more favorably, with the largest gap in whether she was perceived as competent — suggesting that sexiness is most detrimental to her perceived professionalism.

Daniels encouraged young women to choose social media photos more likely to reveal their identities, such as photos from trips they've taken or when they've participated in a sport or hobby rather than ones that are primarily just sexy.

"Don't focus so heavily on appearance," Daniels said. "Focus on who you are as a person and what you do in the world."

Horoscope

Cancer | June 21-July 22. Let someone special know how you feel. A miscommunication could hurt someone's feelings, but a truthful dialogue will strengthen a relationship.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You will be pleasantly surprised if you choose to join a serious-minded organization. Your long list of accomplishments will make you feel proud.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Look before you leap. Although you may have several interests in common with a new acquaintance, you should take time to investigate problems.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Relationships with family members will try your patience. Avoid unpleasant confrontations. Opt to spend time with peers, accomplishing goals that will build your confidence and brighten your future.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Your curiosity will be stimulated by exotic destinations. Even if a trip is not currently possible, there are many cultural activities you can participate in that would quench your thirst for knowledge.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't let another's opinion cause you to change your career direction. Do what's best for you. Consider all of your options.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Turmoil is likely to disrupt your personal life. Take a step back and re-evaluate your current situation. An objective view will be the key to avoiding regret.

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. You will have a much better chance of reaching your goal if you keep your plans a secret. While it's natural to want to share your ideas, wait until you are fully prepared.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Focus on social or humanitarian events that you feel passionate about. Your persistence and dedication will enable you to persuade others to join in the cause that you're championing.

Aries | March 21-April 20. You may be frustrated, but don't let problems at work interfere with your home life. Whatever the issue, do your best, act professionally and keep the two environments separate.

Taurus | April 21-May 21. After working hard, you deserve some downtime to relax with friends. A day of pampering will help prepare you for your next challenge.

Gemini | May 22-June 20. A joint moneymaking scheme may tempt you, but you should hold back. You will do better sticking to conservative investments. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Courting their own agendas

Re: 'When you can't please everyone' (Metro, July 17-20) Columnist Tom Foreman's comparison of the Supreme Court to "referees" implies a level of impartiality that the Court often fails to exhibit. The justices are political appointees, and from Dred Scott down to Citizens United they have usually supported the views and agenda of whoever appointed them (there have been notable exceptions, but not on the present court). It's impossible to read the "logic" behind Bush v. Gore and not realize that this has always been mostly a bunch of political hacks, no matter which side they've supported. The SCOTUS may be the most powerful court in the nation, but that doesn't make it smart or fair.

HARVEY WACHTEL, VIA EMAIL

Have a heart

The current border crisis, where thousands of children are coming to escape violence and poverty in their home countries, is shaping up to be a dark chapter in our nation's history. It continues to amaze me how the supposedly "great" people of this nation have hardened their hearts so thoroughly to innocent children. The reaction I always hope to see is for love and compassion for fellow humans to rule over fear and hatred of the "other," but it seems this will not be the case.

New great emerges

McIlroy claims Open title

Rory McIlroy held off a charge from Sergio Garcia to win his third major title and first British Open Championship. McIlroy wasn't as strong as he was in the first three rounds, but a 1-under 71 was enough to finish at 17-unde, two strokes better than Garcia and Rickie Fowler, who entered the day in second. McIlroy has now won every major except the Masters.

Patriots to watch at training camp

NFL Metro breaks down the players you should be watching when camp opens later this week.

The Patriots kick off the 2014 season in earnest on July 23 when training camp gets underway, with the first practice a day later, in Foxboro.

Last season it was all about Tim Tebow's brief introduction to New England, but the signings this offseason appear to be a bit more practical — and with some staying power.

Metro takes a look at five players who will be on everyone's mind when training camp gets underway.

MARK OSBORNE
@MetroNYSports
mark.osborne@metro.us

Darrelle Revis

Unlike Tebow, Revis is a big-name addition who will be very important to the 2014 season. The cameras will certainly find Revis, the former All Pro for the rival Jets, at the first available opportunity.

The questions over his past criticism of head coach Bill Belichick have already been answered in the offseason and hopefully the focus will be on him replacing the departed Aqib Talib in the secondary.

Revis appeared to bounce back strong from a torn ACL last season in Tampa Bay, so injuries shouldn't be a concern. He should be even better, in fact, a full season removed from the major injury. He doesn't even have to perform as well as his pre-injury level to be a major addition to the Patriots. He was still good enough to make the Pro Bowl in 2013 with the Buccaneers.

Talib, who made the Pro Bowl as well, is now in Denver, and the Jets added Eric Decker and the Bills drafted Sammy Watkins to add to a division that already includes Mike Wallace in Miami.

REVIS APPARENTLY GOT USED TO THE TAMPA WEATHER, AS HE DONNED A JACKET DURING JUNE'S MINICAMP.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Aaron Dobson

Speaking of wide receivers, Dobson sat out all of organized team activities this offseason as he recovered from foot surgery.

But he is set to be back on the field for training camp, where he is expected to improve on a solid rookie campaign in 2013. He finished with 37 catches, 519 yards and four touchdowns in just 12 games due to that foot injury.

The Patriots were expected to upgrade the receiving corps in the offseason, but only did so slightly. They brought back slot receiver Julian Edelman and signed free agent Brandon LaFell, but Dobson — and fellow second-year receiver Kenbrell Thompson — will still be critical pieces to an offense which was 13th in the league in receiving touchdowns (25) despite an elite quarterback.

Dobson is expected to be the deep threat to complement red-zone threats Thompson and LaFell. The team hasn't really had a true burner at receiver since Randy Moss left a few years ago (and you could question how much speed he had left at that point in his career).

DOBSON HAD AN 81-YARD CATCH LAST SEASON AND IS EXPECTED TO BE THE PATRIOTS' DEEP THREAT IN 2014.

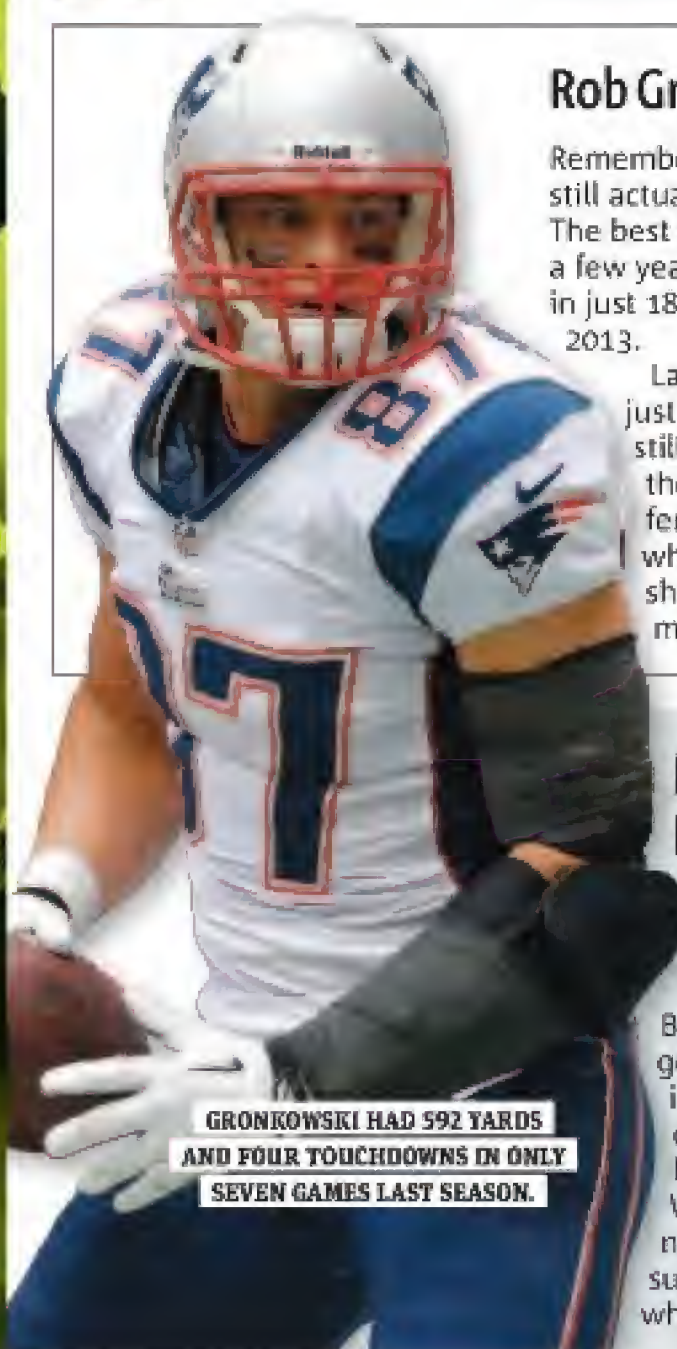

Rob Gronkowski

Remember this guy? Yeah, he still actually plays football. The best tight end in football a few years ago has played in just 18 games in 2012 and 2013.

Last year he played just seven games and is still on the mend from the torn ACL he suffered last December, which cut his season short. He's just seven months removed from knee surgery, so he will be eased into training camp and eventually preseason action. He deferred to the training staff last week on those calls, but said he plans to play Week 1. If that's the case, he'll need to at least get a little bit of action in the preseason.

A healthy Gronkowski completely transforms this Patriots offense and takes the pressure off the wide receivers who struggled at times in 2013.

GRONKOWSKI HAD 592 YARDS AND FOUR TOUCHDOWNS IN ONLY SEVEN GAMES LAST SEASON.

Brandon Browner

One of the more intriguing stories in camp will be that of Browner. Fans better get a good look at him in training camp, because you won't see him in a game until Week 5 against Cincinnati. Browner was suspended four games while a member of Seattle for violating the league's substance abuse policy. He will get a chance to play in preseason games though, so he should develop chemistry with his new teammates.

Browner needs to stay out of trouble after Week 5, too. He was suspended for performance-enhancing drugs and has failed three tests for marijuana in his career. The 6-foot-4 corner is talented, and if he stays out of trouble his pairing with Revis should be among the best in the NFL.

Vince Wilfork

No piece of the defense was missed more than Wilfork last season. (Inset your "big hole to fill" jokes here.) Wilfork and the Patriots engaged in a little bit of a contract spat in the offseason, with Wilfork even expressing a desire to move on from the only team he's called home for 10 years. But in the end, he re-signed for three years and $22.5 million, contingent on staying healthy.

That will be the big question for Wilfork coming off a season-ending torn Achilles early last season. He'll also likely feel rookie Dominique Easley breathing down his neck. The supremely talented first-round pick out of Florida plays a lot like young Jets star Sheldon Richardson. He has the versatility to play inside and outside and make the defense more multiple than Wilfork, who is a pure nose tackle.

MLB. Red Sox interested in deal to acquire Phils' starter Hamels: Reports

The Red Sox may not only eschew selling off parts at the trade deadline; they may be looking to take on talent.

The Boston Globe threw out the piece of information that the Sox sent a scout to look at Phillies starter Cole Hamels recently, while CBS Sports' Jon Heyman echoed those reports on Sunday afternoon.

Hamels is having a tremendous season, but he still has five years and $110 million left on his contract. The Red Sox have been haggling with their own lefty, Jon Lester, unwilling to go much beyond the four years and $70 million they offered before the season started.

Hamels will turn 31 years old in December, while Lester turns 31 just one month later.

The Phillies lefty is 4-5 with a 2.83 ERA and 115 strikeouts in 114 1/3 innings. Both Hamels and Lester have a history of postseason success, with Hamels winning the NLCS and World Series MVP when the Phillies won the championship in 2008.

Any deal for Hamels would require the Red Sox to part with a host of top prospects, however. The Sox have a deep farm system, but re-signing Lester would cost them only money.

The Phillies are 11 games under .500, and a deal of Hamels would mean they're blowing up the core that earned them that championship in 2008. Second baseman Chase Utley could follow Hamels, as well as fellow lefty Cliff Lee.

Boston, now six games under .500, still has seven games left with AL East rival Toronto and three with Tampa Bay before having to decide whether they want to make any moves — coming or going — at the trade deadline. Hamels, due to his extremely high salary, could also clear waivers and be traded after Aug. 1.

Lester leads Sox to sweep Kansas City

Jon Lester continued to state his case for a contract extension with eight innings of shutout baseball Sunday.

The lefty improved to 10-7 on the season, allowing four hits and two walks while striking out eight. Lester is 4-0 and has a 0.85 ERA over his last seven starts. He is now riding a 14-inning scoreless streak.

The Red Sox swept the Royals, who are now under .500 after entering the All-Star break at two games above the mark. Boston, meanwhile, continues to claw back toward the .500 mark. They've now won four straight and seven of their last eight games dating back to before the break.

Brock Holt continues to impress on offense. The third baseman was 2-for-5 on Sunday to raise his average to .370 on the season. The veteran David Ross got a start at catcher in a day game and hit his sixth home run of the season in the fourth inning of hard-throwing rookie Yordano Ventura.

John Lackey (10-6, 3.79 ERA) is scheduled to start Monday in Toronto against Drew Hutchison (6-8, 4.16 ERA). METRO
